Online tool aimed at those looking to move or expand

Looking for a new office or a bigger warehouse?

Businesses looking to expand or move can now get a free list of commercial spaces available in your chosen area of San Diego County from Hughes Marino, San Diego's largest commercial real estate company specializing in tenant representation.

The company is offering the service through its new website, FreeSpaceSurvey.com. Enter some basic information and you'll get emailed information on office, industrial, retail, medical or laboratory space available for lease or purchase.

Brokerage companies typically provide detailed information on space availability only to signed clients, or on a case-by-case basis. Company president Jason Hughes said he decided to establish the free, online service for business owners who are just beginning to explore the market.

"We are now offering to help educate business owners about all of their space options without any commitment from them to work with us," he said. "Obviously our hope and desire is that once these business owners get to know us better, they will ultimately ask for our assistance with their real estate transaction."
