

David Callahan

Senior Vice President | david.callahan@hughesmarino.com

David Callahan is a senior vice president with Hughes Marino, where he specializes in corporate tenant representation. After receiving his MBA from the University of Southern California, David went on to hold management positions with two large publicly traded firms in the pharmaceutical and software industries. Both organizations had offices throughout the U.S. and beyond, which exposed David to the important role that real estate plays in a company's overall operations. He was intrigued by how many different facets of business that are impacted by real estate decisions. From recruitment and retention to managing a company's financial performance, real estate plays a key role in a company's success.

For over 20 years, David has leveraged his experience and business acumen to develop and implement strategic real estate solutions for his clients throughout Southern California and across the nation. He and his team of subject matter experts specialize in workplace design, financial analysis, lease negotiations, construction management, portfolio management and lease administration.

In his free time, David enjoys spending time with his wife and daughter as well as traveling, skiing and mountain biking.

Education

- University of Southern California, Marshall School of Business, MBA
- Tufts University, School of Arts and Sciences, B.A. in political science

Professional Activities

- California Department of Real Estate Licensed Broker
 - Broker License #01397164
- U.S. Green Building Council
 - LEED Accredited Professional
- CoreNet Global
 - Past President and Board Member of the Southern California Chapter
 - Diversity, Equity, & Inclusion (DEI) Certificate Program Participant
- California Lutheran University
 - School of Management Advisory Council Member
- Tufts University
 - Athletics Campaign Committee Member