

Cameron Love

Cameron Love is a senior vice president with Hughes Marino, an industry-leading commercial real estate firm that exclusively represents tenants and buyers, never landlords. As a leader in the firm's San Francisco office, Cameron advises companies in various industries with all aspects of their commercial real estate activities in San Francisco, Silicon Valley and beyond. His extensive knowledge of the market, combined with his experience and problem-solving skills, make him a trusted advisor when representing tenants in strategic planning, dispositions, lease renewals and renegotiations, site selection analysis, financial modeling and portfolio management.

Before joining Hughes Marino, Cameron was a director at Cushman & Wakefield where he represented occupiers exclusively. He has held leadership positions as chair of the Bay Area C&W Future Leaders organization and was a member of the Emerging Technology Advisory practice group. Cameron is also an active member of CoreNet, the global corporate real estate association, holding a chair position in the Bay Area chapter of the CoreNet Young Leaders network and is a candidate for his masters in corporate real estate (MCR) designation.

Cameron graduated with honors from the University of San Francisco, receiving a bachelor's degree in business administration, with a focus in real estate, while also pitching for the USF Dons baseball team. Cameron resides in San Francisco with his wife, Caroline, and in his free time can be found on an intramural soccer field, a tennis court or running near his home in the Richmond District.
